Colorado-based Berg Hill Greenleaf Ruscitti LLP opened its first California office in Irvine.

“[The office] is really the firm’s response to the needs of the large client base in California,” said partner Camille Joy DeCamp, who will be based in Irvine. “So I think my goal is, personally, to continue to service my clients and do that in a way that gets them everything that they need with the backing of the firm and to also service and meet the needs of the firm’s existing clients in California.”

The office is the firm’s fourth. The others are in Boulder, Denver and Cheyenne, Wyoming. With 50 attorneys firmwide, Berg Hill is a full service law firm that specializes in construction, corporate, employment and real estate.

DeCamp and associate Azar M. Khazian joined the firm March 9.

DeCamp specializes in employment and construction law, and handles some other complex business litigation. She spent the majority of her career at Gordon Rees Scully Mansukhani LLP in San Diego. Prior to joining Berg Hill, she practiced at Manning & Kass, Ellrod, Ramirez, Trester LLP.

Berg Hill’s size, the ability to be part of a new office and to be able to practice alongside the firm’s “high caliber attorneys,” were attractive, DeCamp said.

The firm’s work in California goes back many years, but the Irvine office is the firm’s first true expansion into the market, according to Giovanni M. Ruscitti, founding and managing partner of Berg Hill.

“We have a strategic growth plan that isn’t really necessarily focused on locations, number of offices and number of lawyers. It’s really client centric. It’s being able to provide services for clients, when, where and how they need them,” Ruscitti said.

The firm’s model, according to Ruscitti, is to provide high-quality legal services in a boutique environment.

“The quality of service is going to be very boutique like, the cost effectiveness is going to be very boutique like, but we’re not a boutique firm,” he said. “We have the resources to be able to handle transactional matters and litigation matters of every type.”
